Dear Peter,

As you will see, we went to no end of trouble and expense to see that you received a moment of our travels which was both practical and elegant. No doubt the cuff-links are what you have always wanted. They should add to your status, and will no doubt impress any visiting directors.

You will by now have received a few photographs of the coupe in the early stages of restoration. I finished off and left the film with Graeme just before we left on our travels. I have since asked about the other photos on the roll. Graeme tells me that he sent you the lot. We would like to see them at some stage if you could either send them down or bring them with you when you come. I have not seen the coupe since we returned, but may pay it a visit on Saturday.

Sorry that I missed speaking to you when you rang on Sunday night. As mum would have explained, we had a longer flight than planned and I was sleeping it off. Very glad to hear that you will be down for a week (or longer?) next month. I seem to remember writing to you from a couple of odd places, but can't remember where or when. I probably mentioned that we were posting back a ball by ball description to Graeme for dissemination, but you did not get onto the distribution list. Most of it seems to have arrived, apart from a bit from Yugoslavia which might turn up in the next week or two when they find out where Australia is. Our travels through the southern part of Yugoslavia were quite interesting, particularly when we got caught up in a revolution. When we landed, we tarred home in his firearm. I read a few newspapers, mum cleaned up the last of our washing, ~~and~~ ^{we} rang Jo B and D & R to say that we would not be receiving visitors, and went to bed about 4 AM. We got up again a little after midnight for 3 hours until I finished reading the newspapers, then off to bed again so that I would be fresh for work on Monday morning. Mum still had 2 days holiday left.

Jan & Toni called around just after tea on Monday with Glyn, who seemed about twice the size he was when we last saw him. He is starting to cut his first teeth.

We are looking forward to your arrival next month.

Don't forget the photographs

love

Dad & Mum
